

Sebastián Raúl Vansteenkiste

COVER LETTER

Hi! I'm Sebastián, software developer, dad and former Kendo & Iaido instructor from Rosario, Argentina; since 2024 I relocated with my family to Barcelona, Spain and led a full-stack development team in Hitachi Energy's High Voltage division's Digital Passport System project, alas I've reached the limit of what I can contribute to this project and so I'm looking for new opportunities.

I've always had multiple interests which have given me a plethora of skills and knowledge, particularly IT-related: I've gone from freelance PC technician in my teenage years, then web-admin, WordPress website developer, hobbyist video-game dev. and Information Systems Engineering student.

Prior to taking this leading position a year ago, I've spent 10 years in various roles in highly-distributed, multicultural international teams and companies; starting with my first full-time position as Jr. dev. at Accenture, Tech/Team Lead at Globant, and a fullstack contractor from 2018 to 2024. As such, I can say I enjoy working on all stages of software development: from client/user interviews to gathering requirements, their transformation to workable User Stories, and their design, development, documentation, release and maintenance. Both as an independent developer, as part of a team, or especially leading it.

Outside of work I've served as English/Spanish translator and interpreter, Japanese-fencing-NGO board member, Kendo & Iaido instructor, and most recently, a husband and dad. Then in my free time I enjoy deep-diving into various topics, with electro-magnetism, plasma confinement, fusion and ion-based-propulsion systems being my latest.

I've spent this past year growing into my leadership position, leveraging internal training courses and workshops, delved into MS Copilot (various forms) to increase my productivity and attempted to have the best impact I possibly could on the whole project and its team members.
